GRAND JURY CONDUCTS LIQUOR PROBE

ATTORNEY GENERAL CRABBE WILL TESTIFY IN INQUIRY

Columbus Woman Whose Name is Withheld May be Star Witness in Noted Case—Hearing in Cleveland May Lay Bare Flagrant Violation of Dry Laws.

Banishment "to the woods" was the penalty inflicted on deputy federal prohibition inspectors who attempted to interfere with the outpouring of Hayner whisky from the Troy warehouse in 1921 and 1922.

Testimony to this effect is to be laid before the federal grand jurors probing the Ohio liquor permit scandal at Cleveland.

Sam Cole, former deputy stationed at Youngstown, is believed to be the witness on whom A. E. Bernstein, U. S. attorney, is depending for this evidence.

He is expected to tell the grand jurors that he investigated lumber shipments from Troy and found they were in reality Hayner whisky.

He is expected to show that inspectors who attempted to interfere with the withdrawing of whisky from Hayner company were transferred to other districts.

He is expected to tell the grand jury of lumber shipments from Troy, Ohio, which proved to be Hayner whisky and that upon informing his superiors in Youngstown and Columbus, he was transferred to Cincinnati. The following day he is said to have resigned from the department.

Cole was a major in the 37th Division during the World war and is a former Akron councilman and court clerk.

The present jury which promises the greatest expose of political chicanery and bribery in connection with bootlegging activities is divided into five phases.

Who sponsored the applicants for whisky and alcohol and why?

Who supervised the withdrawals?

Who really owned the Hayner plant at Troy?

How much whisky and alcohol were withdrawn by other methods?

The probes are expected to center their attention on the activities and connections of six principals with the whisky and alcohol flood. They are: A Cleveland sportsman, well known in boxing circles.

A Cleveland broker, believed to have had an interest in the distillery.

A Columbus man, said to have made a large contribution to the Republican campaign fund in 1920 and to have wielded considerable political influence.

A friend of the late President Harding, now believed to be Europe.

At least two officials high in the federal inspection service in Ohio.

Cecil H. Kerns, paroled Toledo and Columbus bootlegger and witness before the Daugherty investigating committee, is expected to connect all of these with the alleged conspiracy when he appears before the federal grand jurors.

Bernstein believes he will have Kerns' story corroborated thru the testimony of his secretary, Earl Talmheim, Toledo.

The investigation which centers around an alleged conspiracy to obtain permits for the withdrawal of approximately 45,000 gallons from the Hayner Distillery at Troy, Ohio, is expected to wind up before the end of the week.

Four girl clerks in the office of Director J. E. Russell, in Columbus have been subpoenaed and will appear in Cleveland.

Attorney General C. C. Crabbe went to Cleveland Monday night to tell federal investigators what he knows of the alleged Ohio liquor scandal.

Crabbe said that no subpoena had been served on him but that Bernstein requested his presence there even tho his information had been given the federal probes.

It was again asserted by Crabbe, that his testimony will consist of information imparted to him by a person who is likely to be a star witness. Altho he declined to identify this person it is understood that it is a Columbus woman.

In Railway Brake Shoe Laboratory

For 35 years investigations of the properties of brake shoes, looking toward the discovery of better metal compounds than now used, have been under way. The University of Illinois has been carrying on such investigations for many years in its brake-shoe laboratory where there is a machine, shown in the picture, which measures and records the friction of brake shoes and enables the investigators to measure the weight of metal worn away in the performance of a certain amount of braking work. There are 30,000,000 brake shoes in service on American steam roads and $15,000,000 is spent annually in renewing them.

FARM BUREAU FEDERATION IN COLUMBUS

First Step in Strengthening Organization Thruout the State.

H. J. Briggs represented Pickaway county at a farm bureau training school held in Columbus. The school is the first step in a campaign for strengthening farm bureaus of the state voted by delegates at the annual meeting of the Ohio Farm Bureau Federation during Farmers' Week. Lincoln of the Federation.

The men attending from this and other counties are being given a detailed outline of plans for county organization including membership work and a program of general nature for building agriculture and rural communities. In addition to this county membership work is being planned for March by the farm bureaus of Allen, Huron, Brown, Fulton, Greene, Madison, Marion Ross, Sandusky, Stark and Tuscarawas counties.

A number of farm bureau leaders from other counties attended the school preparatory for similar undertakings in their counties later this year. Farm Bureau officials from Indiana, Michigan and Pennsylvania were also in attendance.

Three-Piece Suit Is in Black and Yellows
This charming costume suit in black kaasha cloth is trimmed with lynx fur and worn with a bodice of sand-colored canton crepe, embroidered in henna and gold.

Velvet Is to Be Found in Milady's Wardrobe
Few materials have more versatility than black velvet. It belongs to no particular age nor is it reserved for any special occasion. It appears alike in the wardrobes of the young and the old.
One sees the most adorable little coats for the two-year-old made of black velvet and collared with ermine or squirrel.
In contrast to these are the gowns of the dowager, dignified, stately affairs, that have a modern smartness added to a certain old-time elegance. Trimmed with beautiful and rare laces, they have a distinction that nothing else approaches.
The schoolgirl frock of black velvet is most appealing in its ingenuousness, and the effect of its simplicity is heightened by a telling bit of color or a touch of gay embroidery or fur used with discretion. One of the smartest frocks of the season is a slim, straight affair of black velvet which has a Peter Pan collar of ermine and wide ermine cuffs finishing the long, tight sleeves.
For evening there are few materials that give greater satisfaction, and black velvet evening frocks vary from the simplest models to those whose intricate drapery is a marvel of the skill of a modiste.

Shoe Buckles Are Among Important Accessories
In these times, when attention is given to the elaboration of the smallest details of dress, shoe buckles are among the important accessories. From the most prominent shops abroad are brought countless designs, novel and artistic, many being set with jewels and semi-precious stones.
Some regard a ribbon bow as smarter for oxfords and colonial pumps, but evening shoes are trimmed with the most ornate and expensive buckles, and colors are harmonized in an attractive manner. A slipper of brown satin is trimmed with buckles of dull gilt beautifully chased. On another, of bronze satin, the buckles are of gilt set with topaz.
Evening shoes of black satin are sunnily ornamented with silver buckles in the shape of an ivy leaf, studded solidly with garnets in diamond cut. This design is most engagingly worked out in silver set with imitation emeralds, stunning on black or white shoes or on a pair of emerald green satin dancing slippers.
The latest designs in rhinestone buckles and shoe ornaments are most effective and are shown on some of the finest evening shoes in black and in white. These and all of the other new styles in shoe buckles are not inexpensive.

Buttons an Important Decoration on Frocks
There was a time when buttons had a single purpose. Not so today. As decoration buttons now occupy a place of distinct importance in fashion's scheme of things.
From the single large button used to fasten a coat dress to the myriads of tiny ones that form the principal decoration on a frock for afternoon, they are used by a number of the best known designers.
In themselves these buttons are often quite lovely, for antique shops have been ransacked to find beautiful old silver or jeweled ones as well as those of enamels exquisitely worked in intricate and colorful designs.
Tiny silver or steel buttons have the greatest possibilities for use as decoration and are formed into conventional patterns. On a smart frock buttons covered with the same material as the dress are arranged to suggest a little bolero jacket. The effect is decidedly smart and rather unusual.

MANY HAPPY RETURNS
Mrs. Elizabeth Sweetman celebrated her 91st birthday in a very quiet manner yesterday at her home in Watt street where her sister, Miss Kate Lynch and niece, Miss Sallie Lynch entertained twelve of her nieces to a dinner at noon in her honor. She also had as guests in the afternoon, Mrs. Margaret Steck, her three daughters and son of Lancaster. The Taggart family called her over long distances in the evening to offer their best wishes.

Our War With Spain.
On the 18th of April, 1898, the United States senate and the house of representatives declared jointly that the Cubans "are and of a right ought to be free and independent" and empowered President McKinley to use the land and naval forces of the United States to their utmost capacity to carry the resolution into effect. This resolution constituted our declaration of war against Spain.

Worse and Worse.

Misprints are often a source of joy. Few are more pleasing than those enshrined in the ancient yarn—probably concocted—of the public banquet at which a speaker, in proposing the toast of the army, coupled it with the name of a distinguished general, whom he described, according to the printed account of the proceedings, as a "bottle-scarred veteran." In the next issue of the paper in which the libel had appeared a note was inserted expressing regret for a typographical error, and explaining that the words should have been "battle-scarred veteran."—Cornhill Magazine.

LAUNDRY TURNS OUT CAR SPICK-AND-SPAN

An enterprising outfit in Chicago has conceived the idea of a laundry for automobiles. The road-soiled car is brought into the plant and a few minutes later it is turned out as spick and span as one would desire. A 150-foot conveyor carries the car from the checking room to a turn table. As the car is carried along on the conveyor each employee has a certain work to do in the turning out of the clean car. The interior of the car is cleaned by vacuum process. The car itself goes through the process of a shower bath before the body is washed and the running gear cleaned and then the car gets a chamolais rub and the glass gets a high polish before it is turned back to you all dolled up.

AUTOISTS URGED TO PLAY SAFETY

Development of Personal as Well as Group Responsibility Is Needed.

Complicated legislation, which is so involved that it often defeats its own ends, is seen as an obstacle to traffic and highway safety by Thomas P. Henry, president of the American Automobile association. He issued a statement requesting all Three A affiliated motor clubs throughout the country to urge upon all car owners the vital necessity of developing a sense of personal as well as group responsibility in driving cars and in safeguarding human life and property.

Legislation Fails.

Legislation, he says, has failed to keep our streets and highways safe, and we must look to the motorist's mind and reason for safety.

According to a comprehensive survey of the automobile and pedestrian accident situation throughout the country, as made by the A. A. A. in pursuance of its drive for safer motoring, there is no direct relation between the amount of severity of legislation and safety, and frequently no relation between law enforcement and safety.

"This reveals the outstanding weakness of automobile legislation and enforcement," President Henry explains. "The average driver feels that the law is something that technically imposes upon him a certain restriction which he can very easily avoid if he is careful not to be caught. There appears to be no clear-cut sense of obligation, thus, revealing an urgent need for a switch to concentration upon a moral obligation.

Effective Enforcement Needed.

"Good motor laws and effective enforcement are absolutely essential in order that those who refuse to appreciate their responsibilities can be punished accordingly, but legislation alone will not do for our present complicated system of motoring. Legislation without an appropriate sense of personal and group responsibility is nothing more than what we choose to call carelessness.

"It is a significant fact that many laws which are not on the statutes are being obeyed more willingly than many which are described by over-enthusiastic safety advocates as having 'teeth' in them. These are the laws of common sense and decency, readily understandable to the average driver and, therefore, a true basis of safety.

"The A. A. A. warns all its affiliated clubs against concentrating too much time upon enactment of additional legislation, but to conduct campaigns immediately to educate the driver to the importance of his responsibility to himself as well as to those he is morally obliged to protect

"We are going to turn selfishness inside out and apply its enormous force into productive channels. If every driver will be selfish enough to give due concern to his own welfare no one need worry about the safety of motoring as a whole.

"With the nation's drivers looking out for themselves first there can be no insanity and road hoggishness to mar motoring.

"We want the automobile driver to feel that any foolhardy or senseless act is a violation of his own rights, his own judgment, his own welfare. As matters now stand, with each state issuing a portfolio of legislation, the motorist has a notion that when he is careless he is but violating some formal dictum in the imposition of which he had no part."

Don't Forget

The following "don't forgets" are suggested to the motorist for winter driving:

Anti-freeze solution, preferably half water and half denatured alcohol, with a small amount of glycerin to prevent alcohol evaporation.

Keep this anti-freeze solution constant by adding more alcohol than water.

Have carburetor cleaned and adjusted for winter driving.

Blow out heating chamber and passages frequently to eliminate carbon.

Clean out carbon and grind valves.

Blow out carburetor and gasoline lines to eliminate water and sediment.

Drain and flush out transmission and rear axle and refill with lubricant suitable to temperature range of your locality.

Keep storage battery fully charged.

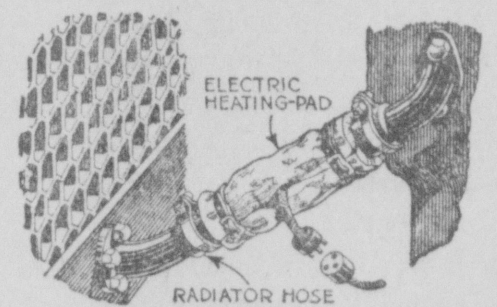

Add distilled water to battery twice a month.

Change oil every 500 miles of driving.

Heating Device Prevents Radiator From Freezing

When a garage is wired for electricity, it is a simple matter to wrap a heating pad around the lower hose connection, running from the water jacket of the engine to the bottom of the radiator, as in the illustration. Two leather straps hold the pad in place and it may be covered with sheet asbestos, if desired.

The cord is shortened so that one-half of the plug is only a few inches from the pad. The other half of the plug is connected by means of a long cord with a lamp socket. When you drive in on cold nights, plug in the three-way switch on high, low or medium, according to the weather, and your car can be left in safety, as the pad is provided with an automatic thermostat, which prevents overheating.—F. S. Root, in Popular Science Monthly.

Repairing Poor Threads Often Is Arduous Task

To recut badly damaged threads, take a nut of the proper size and saw a slot in one side. Spread the slot slightly with a screwdriver or metal wedge and turn the nut over the damaged threads until it reaches the good threads. Remove the wedge and draw together with a wrench so as to tighten the nut on the threads, then turn it back over the damaged part. The split nut will always follow the old thread, but it may be necessary to repeat the operation several times to recut the thread on the damaged section.—Automobile Digest.

Radiator Hose

A kink or twist in the hose may possibly result in poor circulation of the water. This should be avoided. The inside fibers of the hose also tend to become loose and thus clog the system. In making replacements, good steam hose should be used, preferably of three or four-ply thickness.

Denmark Has Oldest Flag.

The flag of Denmark, a plain red banner, bearing on it a white cross, is the oldest flag now in existence. For more than 500 years both Norway and Sweden were united with Denmark under this flag. In the year 1212 King Waldemar of Denmark, when leading his troops to battle against the Livonians, saw, or thought he saw, a bright light in the form of a cross in the sky. He held this appearance to be a promise of divine aid, and pressed forward to victory. From this time he had the cross placed on the flag of his country and called it the Dannebrog—that is, the strength of Denmark.

Beautiful Biblical Story.

The story of Ruth, in holy writ, is as refreshing as a thrush's note heard when a gale drives in from the east. She is the epitome of love and trust and fidelity. She lived in 1322 B. C. Clinging to her adopted mother when all else forsook Naomi, the youthful widow, Ruth comes with that broken mother in Bethlehem, for a famine was in their land of Moab. She goes humbly into the fields to glean corn after the reapers. There her modesty attracts the attention of the wealthy Boaz. The lovely love scenes follow. Boaz marries Ruth, and from their union was descended David, the ancestor of Mary, the mother of Christ.

SIXTY ODD YEARS

AGO CIRCLEVILLE

Supported a Real Race Association
With the Late John Groce As
President-Treasurer.

P. W. Price, the carpenter, while working at the residence of S. T. Morris, found behind a wainscoting an admission ticket of the Willow Bend Race course association year 1860, of which the late John Groce was president.

The Willow Bend course was located on the farm of the late Col. Marshall Anderson, west of the city. The older residents remember when the Willow Bend Race Course was in its ascendancy.

Each year a number of owners of thoroughbreds from Crab Orchard, Kentucky, brought their stock here in the spring to acclimate them and those good old days the sport at Willow Bend was fast and furious.

Col. C. E. Groce remembers on one occasion, when as a school-boy, he got in bad with the school authorities for attending a race meeting in company of his father, instead of going to school.

A WELL SPENT LIFE

With the passing of Mrs. Jane A. Millar on Thursday, February 19th, Madison township and Pickaway county lost one of the finest and most esteemed of the many remarkable women within its boundaries.

She was the wife of Franklin Millar, a native of Madison township, a large farmer, who departed this life March 15, 1878, twenty-four years after his marriage. The mother of seven children she was loved and aided by her children during her later years with all the affection that good children bestow upon their mother.

The daughter of George and Jane (Wilson) Rarey, pioneer settlers of Madison township where the father was a farmer and stock raiser, she had spent her entire life within the boundaries of this township, which is the case of many of the prosperous inhabitants of this smallest but most exclusive of Pickaway county's townships. Educated in the schools of Lithopolis, the town made famous by O. Henry, and now the location of a beautiful monument to another of its noted children, Mrs. Wagnalls, in the form of a library and art museum of stone from the stone quarry in the vicinity, she grew to young womanhood among the people who have been her friends and neighbors all her life. Mrs. Miller, like many others there, loved her Madison township and was proud to be a resident thereof. A truly Christian woman, member of the Methodist Church near Duvall she died as she had lived, loving God, her neighbors and humanity in general. A character whose life is a sermon to the present generation and who will be missed by her neighbors and friends as well as by her family, whose sole object seemed to be to make her happy and comfortable in her declining years. Of her seven children she is survived by four, Margaret R., Franklin G. and Irwin at home and Mrs. Clara Rugh whose farm adjoins that of her home.

Mrs. Millar died in the house to which she came as a bride 71 years ago at the age of 18 years. A beautiful palatial residence, the kind of which Madison township can boast. Set far from the road in a grove of old trees, surrounded by beautiful grass grown fields. The house has been remodeled of late years but there is evidence of the wonderful structure that it was originally. Here is where she reared her family, experienced the joys and sorrows of a loving mother and the sad bereavement of a devoted husband. It was from this home her body was borne Saturday, Feb. 21st, to its last resting place in Reber Hill cemetery and interred beside those of her husband who had been awaiting her for so many years.

A THOUSAND

DOLLARS FOR

EAR OF CORN

Serious Situation Calls for
Careful Selection of Seed
This Year.

Not a single, solitary ear of seed corn should go into Pickaway county soil until it has been properly tested for germinating power.

This warning comes from E. B. Heaton, general manager of the National Seed Corn Show to be held in Chicago March 2 to 7. Writing to the county agricultural agent and county superintendent of schools, Mr. Heaton states that tests on early entries to the show point to the fact that nearly half the ears received to date are not fit for seeding purposes. Normally $3 per cent of the Ohio corn crop is merchantable, but only 56 per cent of last year's crop is of merchantable quality.

It is the seriousness of the situation in which the country is finding itself and in the hope of bringing home to corn growers of the notion the need for careful testing and selection of ears this spring to insure a normal 1925 crop that $17,000 in prizes is being offered by the Sears-Roebuck Agricultural Foundation, according to Mr. Heaton. In addition to a five dollar prize to the farmer in the county showing the best ear, the M. Kittle trophy of a thousand dollars will be awarded to the grower of the best ear of seed sent to the show and another thousand dollars will go to the county agent, farm bureau, agricultural or community organization of the county sending the largest number of entries.

Any person may enter an ear of corn, according to Mr. Heaton and the name, address, county and state of its owner should be on paper wrapped around the ear with the writing on the outside. No entry will be eligible if mailed after March 1, and no prizes will be awarded until after the winning ears had been tested for vitality and disease resistance. The judges of the show are to be selected by the American Society of Agronomy, and entries should be addressed to the National Seed Corn show, Sears-Roebuck Agricultural Foundation, Chicago.

COMING BACK

GIRLS' EARS

MAY BE SEEN

Women Studying How Best
to Suit Head Dress to Individual.

Feminine ears which have been in total eclipse for the last decade are now peeping out in smart coiffures, according to Charles Nestle of New York, authority on hair styles and inventor of the permanent wave.

Modern flappers," said Mr. Nestle, "have guarded their ears from masculine view as scrupulously as Mohammedan belles have hidden their facial charms with veils for centuries. While well stockinged calves have been considered a perfectly respectable adjunct to feminine fashion, baring the ears would have been set down as the height of immodesty.

"But fashion decrees from Paris have emancipated the flapper's ears. Parisian women are brushing their bobbed hair back straight off the brow and tucking it behind the ears. Types of bobbed coiffures are being designed to permit the ear to become an integral part of the headdress. With the reappearance of the ears, individual effects in coiffures are more possible. Smart women are studying how best to suit the head-dress to their particular type of beauty. The size of the jaw, the length of the nose and brow are important factors. Above all, the hair should form an attractive frame to the face. With some women, exposing the ears is not advisable. This is particularly true where the jaw is too long. Brushing back the hair and baring the ears in a face like this creates the effect of a horse like profile."

SPEAKERSHIP IN CONGRESS IS IMPORTANT

General J. Warren Keifer
Only Ohio Man Ever So Honored.

While Ohio has been foremost in furnishing presidents, chief justices, diplomats, cabinet ministers, army and navy officers and other leaders the state has had only one speaker of the house of representatives at Washington and that was General J. Warren Keifer of Springfield, who is now in his ninetieth year and was speaker during the Arthur administration from 1881 to 1883.

Among those who have served in this capacity were Henry Clay and John G. Carlisle of Kentucky, Blaine and Reed of Maine, James K. Polk, afterward president, Schuyler Colfax, afterward vice president when Grant was president, Samuel J. Randall, the great Democratic protectionist of Pennsylvania, General D. B. Henderson of Iowa, Joseph G. Cannon of Illinois, and Champ Clark of Missouri. The office ranks next to those of president and vice president.

For some time it was feared that Ohio would lose out in the next congress by being divided between two favorite sons. There was a tense moment in the first conference held by the Ohio delegation when Representative Theodore E. Burton arose to state his position. It was well known that Mr. Burton would feel very much complimented if he were invited to round out his long public career as speaker, but his voluntary statement soon revealed that there was nothing selfish in his attitude. He told the delegation that he is not a candidate for the speakership; that he is for Longworth with all his heart, at the same time admitting that if Longworth were not a candidate he would have appreciated the support of the Ohio delegation in his own behalf.

After making that statement, removing himself from consideration, Mr. Burton joined whole heartedly in the plans to boost Longworth in an intensive way.

There is some feeling that in case of a deadlock, Mr. Burton may be the dark horse, but it is difficult to imagine how there can be a deadlock in a field that consists of only two real candidates — Longworth and Madden — with a third one to be put forward by the followers of Senator La Follette just to keep up their record of insurgency regular. Some of the New York Republican representatives are showing an inclination to vote for Burton in preference to either Longworth or Madden, but they are receiving no encouragement from the Ohio delegation, which is committed thoroughly to Longworth. — Hamilton News.

Bible Thought for Today

THE BEST PREACHING. — Let your light so shine before men, that they may see your good works, and glorify your Father which is in heaven. — Matt. 5:16.

AMUSEMENTS

An all star cast that includes Betty Blythe, Elliott Dexter, Lowell Sherman, Robert Warwick, Pauline Garon and Burt McIntosh, appear in Murray W. Garsson's big screen production, "The Spitfire" is a film version of "Plaster Saints," the popular novel by Frederic Arnold Kummer. It is a big story of today, with the trials and tribulations of a pretty society girl, Jean Bronson, who is cast adrift from a rich home when she takes exceptions to the way her grandfather would have her live and act. There are thrills when the hero, Douglas Kenyon catches up with Horace Fleming when he finds the latter insulting Miss Bronson the girl he loves. There is also an exciting trend of action when Kenyon unearths proof that his sweetheart's grandfather is engineering a crooked deal in sugar that would enrich him greatly and gouge the poor at the same time. So it ends to the ultimate satisfaction of the lovers, Jean and Douglas, is best answered by seeing the film at the Met theater.

VALLERY CASE APPEALED.

That the several promissory notes involved in the suit of William R. Beard, executor of the will of Andrew J. Vallery vs. J. Boyd Skinner, Gail Skinner and Kate Tootle Vallery, are equal in priority, is the main point in the decision handed down, late Friday by Judge P. J. Blosser. Under a foreclosure sale, to which the decision holds that the plaintiff and Kate Tootle Vallery are entitled, they are to pro-rate the proceeds of the mortgaged property. The sale is to be ordered if the notes are not paid within five days, $24,828.91 being adjudged to be due from the Skinners to Beard and $17,942.14 due to Kate Tootle Vallery.

Each side has taken exceptions and served notice of appeal, the bonds being fixed at $500 each.

AT TOMB OF WASHINGTON

Wife of Judge Ruhl, Grand Master of Masons, Dies Suddenly.

Washington, Feb. 23 (U. P.)—As Common Pleas Judge James B. Ruhl of Cleveland, grand master of Ohio Masons, turned from placing a wreath on the casket of George Washington at a Masonic ceremony at Mount Vernon Monday afternoon, he saw Mrs. Ruhl sink to the ground just outside the entrance to the tomb.

Hastily she was carried out of the afternoon rain into the tomb, and there within the shrine which the Masons had come together from many parts of the country to reverence, a physician said death had been instantaneous. Mrs. Ruhl had been suffering for two years with heart disease.

Surrounded with all the care that the Masons could give, the body of Mrs. Ruhl was removed to Alexandria, Virginia, near Mount Vernon. Judge Ruhl planned to start the return journey to Cleveland with the body of Mrs. Ruhl Tuesday morning. There will be a service at Cleveland and burial will be at the old home of Judge Ruhl at Lisbon, Ohio.

Mrs. Ruhl was 52, and a native of Pennsylvania. She and Judge Ruhl would have celebrated their thirty-first wedding anniversary in April. They have no children.

The last words Mrs. Ruhl heard in this life were the prayer and the few reverent words of ceremony spoken as Judge Ruhl placed the wreath on the casket of the first president whose birthday the nation was observing and who, as a Mason was the subject of special Masonic services.

SIXTY ODD YEARS AGO CIRCLEVILLE

Supported a Real Race Association
With the Late John Groce As
President-Treasurer.

P. W. Price, the carpenter, while working at the residence of S. T. Morris, found behind a wainscoting an admission ticket of the Willow Bend Race course association year 1860, of which the late John Groce was president.

The Willow Bend course was located on the farm of the late Col. Marshall Anderson, west of the city. The older residents remember when the Willow Bend Race Course was in its ascendancy.

Each year a number of owners of thoroughbreds from Crab Orchard, Kentucky, brought their stock here in the spring to acclimate them and those good old days the sport at Willow Bend was fast and furious.

Col. C. E. Groce remembers on one occasion, when as a school-boy, he got in bad with the school authorities for attending a race meeting in company of his father, instead of going to school.

A WELL SPENT LIFE

With the passing of Mrs. Jane A. Millar on Thursday, February 19th, Madison township and Pickaway county lost one of the finest and most esteemed of the many remarkable women within its boundaries.

She was the wife of Franklin Millar, a native of Madison township, a large farmer, who departed this life March 15, 1878, twenty-four years after his marriage. The mother of seven children she was loved and aided by her children during her later years with all the affection that good children bestow upon their mother.

The daughter of George and Jane (Wilson) Rarey, pioneer settlers of Madison township where the father was a farmer and stock raiser, she had spent her entire life within the boundaries of this township, which is the case of many of the prosperous inhabitants of this smallest but most exclusive of Pickaway county's townships. Educated in the schools of Lithopolis, the town made famous by O. Henry, and now the location of a beautiful monument to another of its noted children, Mrs. Wagnalls, in the form of a library and art museum of stone from the stone quarry in the vicinity, she grew to young womanhood among the people who have been her friends and neighbors all her life. Mrs. Miller, like many others there, loved her Madison township and was proud to be a resident thereof. A truly Christian woman, member of the Methodist Church near Duvall she died as she had lived, loving God, her neighbors and humanity in general. A character whose life is a sermon to the present generation and who will be missed by her neighbors and friends as well as by her family, whose sole object seemed to be to make her happy and comfortable in her declining years. Of her seven children she is survived by four, Margaret R., Franklin G. and Irwin at home and Mrs. Clara Rugh whose farm adjoins that of her home.

Mrs. Millar died in the house to which she came as a bride 71 years ago at the age of 18 years. A beautiful palatial residence, the kind of which Madison township can boast. Set far from the road in a grove of old trees, surrounded by beautiful grass grown fields. The house has been remodeled of late years but there is evidence of the wonderful structure that it was originally. Here is where she reared her family, experienced the joys and sorrows of a loving mother and the sad bereavement of a devoted husband. It was from this home her body was borne Saturday, Feb. 21st, to its last resting place in Reber Hill cemetery and interred beside those of her husband who had been awaiting her for so many years.

A THOUSAND DOLLARS FOR EAR OF CORN

Serious Situation Calls for
Careful Selection of Seed
This Year.

Not a single, solitary ear of seed corn should go into Pickaway county soil until it has been properly tested for germinating power.

This warning comes from E. B. Heaton, general manager of the National Seed Corn Show to be held in Chicago March 2 to 7. Writing to the county agricultural agent and county superintendent of schools, Mr. Heaton states that tests on early entries to the show point to the fact that nearly half the ears received to date are not fit for seeding purposes. Normally 83 per cent of the Ohio corn crop is merchantable, but only 56 per cent of last year's crop is of merchantable quality.

It is the seriousness of the situation in which the country is finding itself and in the hope of bringing home to corn growers of the notion the need for careful testing and selection of ears this spring to insure a normal 1925 crop that $17,000 in prizes is being offered by the Sears-Roebuck Agricultural Foundation, according to Mr. Heaton. In addition to a five dollar prize to the farmer in the county showing the best ear, the M. Kittle trophy of a thousand dollars will be awarded to the grower of the best ear of seed sent to the show and another thousand dollars will go to the county agent, farm bureau, agricultural or community organization of the county sending the largest number of entries.

Any person may enter an ear of corn, according to Mr. Heaton and the name, address, county and state of its owner should be on paper wrapped around the ear with the writing on the outside. No entry will be eligible if mailed after March 1, and no prizes will be awarded until after the winning ears had been tested for vitality and disease resistance. The judges of the show are to be selected by the American Society of Agronomy, and entries should be addressed to the National Seed Corn show, Sears-Roebuck Agricultural Foundation, Chicago.

COMING BACK GIRLS' EARS MAY BE SEEN

Women Studying How Best
to Suit Head Dress to Individual.

Feminine ears which have been in total eclipse for the last decade are now peeping out in smart coiffures, according to Charles Nestle of New York, authority on hair styles and inventor of the permanent wave.

Modern flappers," said Mr. Nestle, "have guarded their ears from masculine view as scrupulously as Mohammedan belles have hidden their facial charms with veils for centuries. While well stockinged calves have been considered a perfectly respectable adjunct to feminine fashion, baring the ears would have been set down as the height of immodesty.

"But fashion decrees from Paris have emancipated the flapper's ears. Parisian women are brushing their bobbed hair back straight off the brow and tucking it behind the ears. Types of bobbed coiffures are being designed to permit the ear to become an integral part of the headdress. With the reappearance of the ears, individual effects in coiffures are more possible. Smart women are studying how best to suit the head-dress to their particular type of beauty. The size of the jaw, the length of the nose and brow are important factors. Above all, the hair should form an attractive frame to the face. With some women, exposing the ears is not advisable. This is particularly true where the jaw is too long. Brushing back the hair and baring the ears in a face like this creates the effect of a horse like profile."

SPEAKERSHIP IN CONGRESS IS IMPORTANT

General J. Warren Keifer
Only Ohio Man Ever So Honored.

While Ohio has been foremost in furnishing presidents, chief justices, diplomats, cabinet ministers, army and navy officers and other leaders the state has had only one speaker of the house of representatives at Washington and that was General J. Warren Keifer of Springfield, who is now in his ninetieth year and was speaker during the Arthur administration from 1881 to 1883.

Among those who have served in this capacity were Henry Clay and John G. Carlisle of Kentucky, Blaine and Reed of Maine, James K. Polk, afterward president, Schuyler Colfax, afterward vice president when Grant was president, Samuel J. Randall, the great Democratic protectionist of Pennsylvania, General D. B. Henderson of Iowa, Joseph G. Cannon of Illinois, and Champ Clark of Missouri. The office ranks next to those of president and vice president.

For some time it was feared that Ohio would lose out in the next congress by being divided between two favorite sons. There was a tense moment in the first conference held by the Ohio delegation when Representative Theodore E. Burton arose to state his position. It was well known that Mr. Burton would feel very much complimented if he were invited to round out his long public career as speaker, but his voluntary statement soon revealed that there was nothing selfish in his attitude. He told the delegation that he is not a candidate for the speakership; that he is for Longworth with all his heart, at the same time admitting that if Longworth were not a candidate he would have appreciated the support of the Ohio delegation in his own behalf.

After making that statement, removing himself from consideration, Mr. Burton joined whole heartedly in the plans to boost Longworth in an intensive way.

There is some feeling that in case of a deadlock, Mr. Burton may be the dark horse, but it is difficult to imagine how there can be a deadlock in a field that consists of only two real candidates — Longworth and Madden — with a third one to be put forward by the followers of Senator La Follette just to keep up their record of insurgency regular. Some of the New York Republican representatives are showing an inclination to vote for Burton in preference to either Longworth or Madden, but they are receiving no encouragement from the Ohio delegation, which is committed thoroughly to Longworth.—Hamilton News.

THE BEST PREACHING.—Let your light so shine before men, that they may see your good works, and glorify your Father which is in heaven.—Matt. 5:16.

AMUSEMENTS

An all star cast that includes Betty Blythe, Elliott Dexter, Lowell Sherman, Robert Warwick, Pauline Garon and Burt McIntosh, appear in Murray W. Garsson's big screen production, "The Spitfire" is a film version of "Plaster Saints," the popular novel by Frederic Arnold Kummer. It is a big story of today, with the trials and tribulations of a pretty society girl, Jean Bronson, who is cast adrift from a rich home when she takes exceptions to the way her grandfather would have her live and act. There are thrills when the hero, Douglas Kenyon catches up with Horace Fleming when he finds the latter insulting Miss Bronson the girl he loves. There is also an exciting trend of action when Kenyon unearths proof that his sweetheart's grandfather is engineering a crooked deal in sugar that would enrich him greatly and gouge the poor at the same time. So it ends to the ultimate satisfaction of the lovers, Jean and Douglas, is best answered by seeing the film at the Met theater.

VALLERY CASE APPEALED.

That the several promissory notes involved in the suit of William R. Beard, executor of the will of Andrew J. Vallery vs. J. Boyd Skinner, Gail Skinner and Kate Tootle Vallery, are equal in priority, is the main point in the decision handed down, late Friday by Judge P. J. Blosser. Under a foreclosure sale, to which the decision holds that the plaintiff and Kate Tootle Vallery are entitled, they are to pro-rate the proceeds of the mortgaged property. The sale is to be ordered if the notes are not paid within five days, $24,828.91 being adjudged to be due from the Skinners to Beard and $17,942.14 due to Kate Tootle Vallery.

Each side has taken exceptions and served notice of appeal, the bonds being fixed at $500 each.

John P. Phillips is attorney for Beard and Wilby G. Hyde attorney for Mrs. Vallery.—Scioto Gazette.

AT TOMB OF WASHINGTON

Wife of Judge Ruhl, Grand Master of Masons, Dies Suddenly.

Washington, Feb. 23 (U. P.)—As Common Pleas Judge James B. Ruhl of Cleveland, grand master of Ohio Masons, turned from placing a wreath on the casket of George Washington at a Masonic ceremony at Mount Vernon Monday afternoon, he saw Mrs. Ruhl sink to the ground just outside the entrance to the tomb.

Hastily she was carried out of the afternoon rain into the tomb, and there within the shrine which the Masons had come together from many parts of the country to reverence, a physician said death had been instantaneous. Mrs. Ruhl had been suffering for two years with heart disease.

Surrounded with all the care that the Masons could give, the body of Mrs. Ruhl was removed to Alexandria, Virginia, near Mount Vernon. Judge Ruhl planned to start the return journey to Cleveland with the body of Mrs. Ruhl Tuesday morning. There will be a service at Cleveland and burial will be at the old home of Judge Ruhl at Lisbon, Ohio.

Mrs. Ruhl was 52, and a native of Pennsylvania. She and Judge Ruhl would have celebrated their thirty-first wedding anniversary in April. They have no children.

The last words Mrs. Ruhl heard in this life were the prayer and the few reverent words of ceremony spoken as Judge Ruhl placed the wreath on the casket of the first president whose birthday the nation was observing and who, as a Mason was the subject of special Masonic services.

A Young Man's Heritage

By CLARISSA MACKIE

(Copyright.)

"YOU wished to see me, Mr. Adams?" reminded Donald Cameron, as he shook hands with the lawyer.

"Yes, Donald, and I will cut the story short and tell you that you have fallen heir to a small fortune," Mr. Adams unfolded a crackling legal document, and adjusted his horn-rimmed glasses. "Of course you have kept in touch with Cyrus Peddie all these years, since you left Meadows," he suggested.

Donald laughed ruefully. "To tell the truth, Mr. Adams, Cyrus Peddie hated the very sight of me when I was a boy—of course we tormented him by stealing apples and cherries, and once he caught me and he certainly gave me one good whaling! As I grew up, though, he seemed to forget, and the hatred settled into cold dislike. He and my father were quite chummy at one time," he ended reminiscently.

The lawyer smiled. "Cyrus Peddie left one thousand dollars to his only relation, a grandniece, who lived with him and cared for him, and every other dollar, every stick and stone he bequeathed to the son of his good friend, Alexander Cameron."

"Is she very young?"

"Sweet and twenty, proud as the dickens, Donald, and—well, the rest of it is for you to discover."

"Of course her attitude is hostile to the usurper."

"Why don't you go and see her—I will go with you after lunch, if you have no other engagement."

Donald took the copy of the will back to the hotel where he was stopping, for all of his own family had moved away from Meadows. As he read the brief document, he was thrilled and puzzled in turn when he realized that he was now the owner of the quaint old Colonial house with its mighty acreage of rich land.

"Of course I cannot accept it," he told himself seriously; "I am a man with splendid opportunities before me. I do not need the money that should belong to a girl!" He said as much to the lawyer as Mr. Adams drove him out to the Peddie place on Forest street. The old-fashioned flower gardens were in full bloom and the roses, long neglected, made a fragrant, colorful tangle on the southern slope. A girl was working there, her face concealed by a big flopping straw hat. Mr. Adams and Donald made their way along box-bordered paths until they reached the roses.

"Good morning, Miss Roberta," called the lawyer.

"Ah, Mr. Adams, how do you do?" She turned swiftly and greeted them in pretty self-possession. She regarded Donald with cold gravity when she heard his name.

"I thought Mr. Cameron ought to come over and see you today," explained the lawyer as they walked toward the house.

"Will you take care of him for awhile, Miss Gray? I am going on to my sister's for a brief call and will return and pick him up."

"We will have a cup of tea for you, Mr. Adams," she promised hospitably, and after he had rolled away in his car, she removed her big hat revealing soft red brown hair.

"It is hard to hate you, Mr. Cameron," she said plaintively.

"Don't do that, please!" he begged. "Your grand-uncle did that when I was a pesky boy; I cannot understand what prompted his change of heart!"

"Uncle Cyrus used to say that the most mischievous and tormenting small boys grew to be the smartest men—that must be the reason," she smiled adorably.

"I am afraid that doesn't apply to me, Miss Gray," admitted Donald. "I particularly wanted to assure you, that while I deeply appreciate the motive that prompted Mr. Peddie's gift, I shall never touch a penny of it—it rightfully belongs to you."

"How generous you are," she exclaimed, "but I believe my uncle's wishes should be respected. It was his money."

"Surely it can be arranged so that I may receive your thousand dollars and you take the rest of it—I will talk to Mr. Adams about it," he said in a masterful manner, but he had not counted on the bit of red in Roberta's hair.

"Of course I shall refuse to accept anything except the money my uncle wished me to have," she protested haughtily.

Mr. Adams found them in heated discussion, and he carried Donald off, with suppressed mirth at the cool farewells of the young people.

Six months later the situation remained unchanged. Roberta Gray and the middle-aged housekeeper who lived with her, remained in the old house while Donald made frequent visits to Meadows to argue his case and both of them were terribly unhappy for love, unknown, had entered the case.

At last Mr. Adams called them into conference at his office. "You must compromise this matter," he said severely. "I'll leave you alone for ten minutes." When he returned they were standing together by the window.

"It is all settled," beamed Donald. "Roberta's going to marry me; how is that for a compromise, sir? But I feel that in having Roberta, I'm getting more than my share."

"That is the perfect compromise! Bless you, my children!" chuckled the old lawyer. "I know it will please Cyrus Peddie!"

The memorial to Lincoln designed by Saint Gaudens and erected in Chicago is one of the most remarkable character studies in stone ever designed. The rugged simplicity of the monument, combined with the faithful portraiture of the statue, seems to breathe the spirit of the Great Man.

The MODERN MONUMENT builders should give you the same results. I can refer you to many memorials erected by me in the past 27 years of my business here. Call at show room. No agents to annoy you.

N. Y. POLICE HEAD
Tells of Changes Caused By Prohibition and Autos.

Police methods in catching criminals and suppressing crime are undergoing one of the most revolutionary changes seen in years, according to Richard E. Enright, commissioner of police in New York City, with prohibition and the automobile as the chief factors underlying the change, and of the police efforts to catch up with what he calls, "the new styles in crime," appears in this week's issue of Liberty.

"The automobile, perhaps, has played a greater part in changing the conditions of crime than any other one thing," he says. It affords a rapid and easily available means of reaching the scene and of getting away. It is difficult to trace, because criminals understanding conditions use stolen cars and carry extra number plates to be changed quickly. But it has had a direct effect upon police forces, because it has withdrawn a great proportion of the patrolmen from suppressing criminals and protecting life and protecting traffic.

"Prohibition, which has been an aid to police work in some ways, has brought new problems and complicated the business of catching criminals. The saloon, as it existed, was a criminal breeder, and also a criminal catcher. It was the natural hangout of those engaged in crime. After the commission of a crime the police watched these hangouts of criminals and felt sure they would appear sooner or later. The bootlegging places of those suspected of bootlegging afford little refuge for them now.

"The bootlegger does not harbor the criminal, as he is taking enough chances with the law without adding to his danger."

Must Be Complete Change
It matters little what kind of a hobby you are taking up provided it takes you outdoors from your studies or work and sends you back fresher and better fitted to grapple with the numerous and varied problems that confront you daily, always remembering that if a hobby is to be really effective it must be something that is a complete change. Hobbies are legion, though some are more attractive than others.—Edinburgh Scotsman.

Bacteria in Currency
Coins are much more sanitary than paper money, a recent study made by a German bacteriologist discloses. On a bank note which had been in circulation some time and subjected to frequent handling, as many as 143,000 bacteria were discovered. Metallic coins showed a much smaller bacteria count, but children placing them in their mouths are in danger of infection.

Likes Peach Pits
Street boys have been cleared of the suspicion that they were helping themselves to peaches displayed in front of his store by a neighborhood grocer. Recently the grocer discovered that a large fox squirrel was the guilty party. Squirrels do not eat fruit, but this one had learned that there is a pit inside encasing a meaty nut on which it fed.—Grit.

"Gothic Art"
The term Gothic was originally applied by the Italians to the pointed architecture which preceded the Renaissance, because the Italian artists regarded the new style as worthy only of the barbaric Goths. The erroneous idea that the style was Germanic became prevalent and the term Gothic was generally adopted.

True Talk
James G. McFarland, grand exalted ruler of the Elks: "Wonderful ideals, exalted lessons, purposeful thought, fill our rituals and enrich our teachings. But they are as dead as ashes on humanity's hearthstones if they do not burn with the fire of deeds."—Chicago News.

Phrase Coined in Ignorance
It is a curious fact that the phrase, "bald as a badger," owes its origin to authors of the past who had no exact knowledge of natural history, and who, because the forehead of a badger is covered with smooth white hairs, came to the conclusion that it was bald.

Gas From Straw
Tests conducted by the bureau of chemistry show that gas produced from straw may be used successfully for lighting and heating and as motor fuel, but indicate that use of this material for the production of gas on the farm is not practicable.

Wife's Attitude
A wife's attitude is that a husband ought always to take her advice, and if it doesn't prove good she can have the pleasure of roasting him for not showing a little more will power to decide things for himself.—Cincinnati Enquirer.

Blue Eyes Keener

Blue-eyed men are better shots than the brown-eyed ones, United States army statistics show. Of 1,000 men qualifying for military marksmanship, 605 have blue eyes, while the remaining 395 have brown eyes.

Church Uses Hand Organ

In a small parish church at Trottscliffe, England, a hand organ is used regularly for services and weddings. It is capable of playing 60 hymn tunes, and the sexton turns the handle.

Odd Forms of Currency

The Igaru people use broken rice for currency, this being a fairly constant percentage of their stock of rice. The Chinese in some parts use compressed blocks of tea.

Potential Cotton Growth

British and Portuguese East Africa have areas of land suitable for cotton production twice as great as the cotton lands of the United States.

Hardy Western Ewes
Best for Beginners
Are Freer From Parasites Than Native Animals.

Because western ewes are hardier and freer from parasites than native ewes, they are recommended as foundation stock for the beginner in sheep husbandry by Phil A. Anderson of the division of animal husbandry, University farm at St. Paul, Minn.

Mr. Anderson explains that sheep that come to the market may be divided into two general classes—natives, or sheep of medium or long wool breeding, raised on small farms, and westerns, or sheep of fine wool or Merino breeding, raised under western range conditions.

Usually the natives come to the market in small lots. Buyers of large numbers, therefore, are likely to get sheep of different breeding. Often native ewes show poor breeding because poor sires were used on many farm flocks. Western ewes, on the other hand, come to the market in larger consignments. They are smaller in size than natives, but they have the advantage of hardiness and greater freedom from disease and, if mated with good rams of the medium-wooled or long-wooled breeds, they will produce very acceptable lambs.

If the beginner is in position to make a finer selection, Mr. Anderson advises him to pick ewes having broad firm backs, wide joints, full and plump legs of mutton, smooth shoulders and short necks. By saving the best ewe lambs each year, the farmer can cull the poorer stock and build up a flock worth while.

Handbook Prepared for Benefit of Cow Tester

A handbook for cow testers has been prepared and published by the United States Department of Agriculture which will be of considerable value and help to the men engaged in the work of testing cows for production in cow testing associations. Many testers are not especially trained for their particular work, but by following the suggestions of the handbook and the standard methods advised, they will make their records much more valuable to the dairymen, and also more useful in the various studies by the department based on such records. Every tester should have one of these handbooks; they are printed in a convenient size for carrying in the pocket.

The handbook not only informs the tester just how to do his work in the most valuable way, but also informs the owner of the herd just what he can expect of the tester. A thorough knowledge of the duties of the tester by both the tester and the owner of the herd should aid materially in promoting harmony and better co-operation in cow testing work.

A copy of the handbook, which is called Miscellaneous Circular No. 26, may be secured upon request, as long as the supply lasts, from the United States Department of Agriculture, Washington, D. C.

Soy Beans Recommended
as Emergency Hay Crop

The Pennsylvania agricultural experiment station has completed some feeding experiments comparing soy bean hay and clover hay with alfalfa when fed to dairy cows.

During the winter of 1923-24 ten Holstein cows were used in a nine-weeks' duration trial. The soy bean and alfalfa hay used was of good quality. The cows were all in a high state of lactation.

The cows receiving soy bean hay produced 3.3 per cent less milk than those receiving alfalfa hay. As an emergency hay crop for dairy farms soy beans are highly recommended.

A feeding trial of six weeks' duration was conducted comparing red clover hay with alfalfa hay for milk production.

The cows receiving the clover hay produced 6.5 per cent less milk than those receiving alfalfa.—Pennsylvania Experiment Station Bulletin No. 188.

FARM FACTS

Repair machinery for spring operations.

Cabbages keep well in a barrel buried in the ground.

Watch your seed corn, peas, etc., and fumigate promptly if weevils appear.

Between 1918 and 1924 the plantings of lettuce rose from 16,800 acres to 63,000 acres.

The most successful pure bred live stock raising in the future will be a community enterprise.

The exceedingly slow and over-cautious man may seldom make mistakes, or accomplish anything.

Even if machinery did not rust out when exposed to winter weather, it's an eyesore lying around the premises.

High-grade marl gives about the same results as limestone in making clover grow, if used in the same quantity to the acre.

Don't go into debt to buy feed for poor cows. Investigators find that one ton of every eight purchased by feeders is unwisely used and is therefore an economic waste.

What Is Civilization?
"It's all in the point of view," is true of a good many things, and one of these may be the question, "What is civilization?" As late as the seventeenth century the highbrows of England were yet to be astonished by the advent of the fork. It was introduced by Thomas Coryate, the famous wanderer and writer, who said of it in his "Crudities": "The Italians cannot by any means endure to have their flesh touched with fingers, seeing that all men's fingers are not alike clean." For this he was long ridiculed. They called him the man who "used a fork at feeding."

BEAUTY SHOP POPULAR IN LONG AGO

Ruin of All Europe Was Seen as France Set Styles.

"Every once in a while somebody says the nation is on the skids because women pass a few hours a week (or a month) in a beauty shop," writes Leslie P. Eichel in Colliers.

"That's old stuff. So old that the ancient Greeks, if they could return would laugh about it. For, twenty-three hundred years ago, Greek women passed a large part of the day improving their 'Spartanlike natural beauty.'"

"Greek women, it is true, were home women. Custom decreed that they should have many home duties and few opportunities to meet strange men. They 'fixed up,' nevertheless. The rich Greek women went farther than the average wealthy American woman. She had a slave or two to rub fragrant oils upon her body following a bath. The hair was pomaded and perhaps dyed, the face rouged, the eyebrows were dyed with black paint.

"Greek comic writers and poets vainly tried to stop the 'beautifying.' They told how unbecoming it was to a civilized people to have black streams pouring from the eyes, color running down to the neck from the cheeks and the hair becoming green thru contact with white lead on the forehead.

"France was represented as 'going to the dogs' in 1721 by Mercier, a writer of that period.

"Mercier satirized false mustaches affected by men, as well as pointed and powdered wigs; and the curls in tiers and the scent of essences and amber powder on women.

"The indignant writer asserted the powder (flour) used in Paris in a single day on two thousand heads would have fed 'ten thousand unfortunate persons.'

"At that time, he said, there were twelve hundred hairdressers under patent of the king in Paris, employing six thousand boy helpers. In addition, there were two thousand chamberlains following the same occupation in the homes of the rich, and six thousand lackeys 'with hardly any other occupation.' Besides, persons were employed manufacturing hair papers, curling irons and razors.

"Mercier could see no other outcome but the ruin of all Europe, as France was setting styles and this particular style took people away from homes and business to barber shops. Worst of all (according to Mercier), the atmosphere of the barber shops was one of gossip and—he whispered, barbers and hairdressers were a 'race of liars.'"

MRS. MARY CURRY DEAD.

Mrs. Mary Curry aged 75 years, widow of James Curry, who made her home with her daughter, Mrs. A. A. Michaels, 1159 Say avenue, Columbus died Sunday from complications, due to advanced age. Another daughter, Mrs. Robert Burkett of Smithfield, Ohio and one son, James Curry of Columbus also survive her. Funeral services were held Tuesday afternoon at 2 o'clock at the residence. Rev. N. W. Sager officiated. Burial was made in Union cemetery.

The Curry family formerly resided in this city.

Youthful Saint.

St. Agnes was a Roman virgin, and martyr, who at the age of 13 suffered persecution and was beheaded under Diocletian about the year 304. At Rome there is an annual procession in her honor, when a lamb, highly decorated, is led through the city. The connection of her name with the Latin for lamb—agnus—probably has led to the association of this animal with her memory.
